Table MCSP3: As you may know, TBS aired Atlanta Braves fans doing the Tomahawk Chop, a gesture and cheer in which fans simulate a tomahawk chopping with their arms while singing a Native American 'war chant,' during the NLCS against the LA Dodgers. Critics of the Tomahawk Chop say it is a racist stereotype and caricature of Native American people, while supporters say it is an expression of unity among fans. To what extent do media companies have a responsibility to not show cheers and gestures that can be considered offensive?
